다음을 듣고, 남자가 하는 말의 목적으로 가장 적절한 것을 고르시오.

M: Hello, I'm your tour guide, Jason Miller. Are you ready to ride a fantastic hot air balloon? Soon, we're going to float with the breeze hundreds of meters up in the air. Before getting in the hot air balloon basket, I'll explain the safety rules for the ride. First, don't do anything that can cause a fire. There's a propane tank inside the basket, so a fire could cause it to explode. Second, always listen to the pilot when he gives out safety reminders during the flight. Third, during landing, place all of your personal items such as cameras into your bag. Unstored items can cause injury due to the impact of the landing. Please keep these safety rules in mind to avoid the risk of an accident. Happy travels!

W: Yeah, we can grow and share fresh organic vegetables.

M: Right. Working on the gardens together, we can build a sense of community.

W: We'll also have beautiful green spaces on the rooftops. Easy access to nature can relieve our stress.

M: How nice! And I read that rooftop gardens help to reduce the dust in the air.

W: Really? We can make a positive contribution to the environment.

M: Definitely. Rooftop vegetable gardens on our apartment buildings seem pretty beneficial in many ways.

W: I agree. We're on quite a tight budget this month. Then, which capacity do we need?

M: I think a 14kg dryer is too big for just two of us.

W: Right. Let's choose a smaller one. Hmm... some of the dryers have a smart function.

M: What's the smart function?

W: Using that function, we can check the laundry drying progress with an app. It seems convenient.

M: Then, let's go for it. That leaves us with two options left.

W: A metal one would go well with our house.

M: Perfect! I'll order that one.

W: I know, but I feel less confident in physics. It sounds really hard.

M: Hey, don't give up before you even try. You might find it more interesting than you think.

W: Yeah, but I heard that there's lots of math involved in physics.

M: You're a hardworking student. Why are you so worried?

W: Honestly, I'm a bit worried that I can't get a good score.

M: Getting a good score is important, but learning physics will help you to study bioengineering later in college.

W: Welcome to Health Digest! I'm your host, Ellen Parker. Today I'd like to share with you traditional remedies that your grandma might have used. These remedies have been thought out of fashion, but medical experts say they may actually work. Here are some good examples! First, when you have the symptoms of a sore throat, gargle with salt water. It can reduce swelling in your throat and relieve some of the pain. Second, when you're suffering from dry skin, take a bath with oatmeal. Although it sounds weird to bathe in something you might eat, oatmeal baths can help moisturize your skin. Third, when you have pain from a sunburn, apply aloe to sunburned areas. Aloe contains soothing substances that can help with burns. Fourth, if you have nausea, drinking ginger tea is an effective aid. Compounds in ginger may work in a similar way to anti-nausea medications. Listeners, you can try these time-tested remedies before heading to the pharmacy for medicines.
